

Jerry A. Linzy

Jerry Linzy is Executive Partner Emeritus of Jerold Panas, Linzy & Partners— a major force in the field of Financial Resource Development.

Mr. Linzy brings to his position remarkable experience. He has nearly fifty years (thirty with the firm) experience as a senior development officer in major healthcare institutions and higher education. Since joining the firm, he has been involved with every type of institution and has been successfully related to most of the major clients of the firm.

While working with institutions throughout the United States, Canada, and Australia, Mr. Linzy remained an active volunteer in his community. He served as an alumni member of the Board of Trustees of the University of Evansville and President of the University's Alumni Association.

He served two terms on the Evansville City Council. Additionally, he was a member of the Corporate Council for Interlochen Center for the Arts in Interlochen, Michigan. He served as past International Chair of the Association for Healthcare Philanthropy.

Jerry Linzy is a contributing author of The NonProfit Handbook. For twenty-two years, he taught in six tracks at the AHP Institute at the University of Wisconsin in Madison.

He serves on the Advisory Board for the Institute for Charitable Giving.
